I set my heart at first upon wealth: And baried away my peace and health; But, sh! The slippery change went about like air; And when I had clutched a handful here,

I set my heart upon travels grand: Hurrah! Add spurn'd our plain old fatherland: But, ab! Naught seem'd to be just the thing it shoul Most comfortless bed and different food, My tastes misunderstood.

I set my heart upon sounding fame; And, lo! I'm eclips'd by some upstart's name
And, ah!

When in public life I loom'd quite high,
The folks that pass'd me would look away—
Their very worst friend was I.

And then I set my heart upon war;

Hurrah! We gain'd some battles with eclat, Hurrah! We troubled the foe with sword and flam And some of our friends fared quite the sam I lost a leg for fame. Now I've set my heart upon nothing you se And the whole wide world belongs to me.
